Pollinator Week
Discovery Center | 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. | Free with Gardens Admission

In support of Callaway Gardens’ ongoing mission towards education, conservation, sustainability, and land stewardship, we are excited to take part in Pollinator Week: Monday, August 19 - Friday, August 23.

Join us for a weeklong celebration of our important pollinators — bees, butterflies, birds, bats, and beetles — and the plants that support them. We hope you leave inspired to do your small part to support a pollinator-friendly ecosystem!

MONDAY  Pollinator Walk  1 - 3 p.m.
Explore the wonderful world of pollinators as we tour the Discovery Center Backyard Wildlife Habitat and Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Trail on the search for beneficial native pollinators.

TUESDAY  Milkweed Seeding  1 - 3 p.m.
Ever wanted to attract those beautiful Monarchs to your yard? Planting native milkweed is just the place to start! You will be able to plant and take home milkweed seed that you can add your garden.

WEDNESDAY  Pollinator Lunch & Learn  1 - 3 p.m.
Birds, insects, and other wildlife serve as pollinators! We will discuss different pollinators within our area and their importance.

THURSDAY  Insect Collecting  1 - 3 p.m.
We will get see all those insects up close and as we going on an insect collecting hike around the Discovery Center and Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Trail.

FRIDAY  Pollinator Census  1 - 3 p.m.
Come be a part of the annual University of Georgia Great Pollinator Census as we record and monitor pollinators seen throughout Callaway Gardens.

SATURDAY  What’s the Buzz? Creating the Perfect Pollinator Habitat
Ever wondered what you can do to help out those wonderful pollinators? Learn about the right plants, protection, and provision you can provide pollinators to make them feel right at home in your own backyard.

10 - 11:30 a.m. | $20 per person
